

Solar device puts wind up damp rooms

FRESH APPROACH ... Solitude retreat at Natural Bridge has installed SolarVenti to keep fresh air in its cabins.

FRESH air helps not only protect properties, belongings and occupants against damp and mouldy conditions, but also helps to create a healthy indoor environment.

With SolarVenti, there is a way to have fresh air all year round.

A form of solar-powered drying and heating, SolarVenti can benefit any room left unoccupied for long periods or with poor ventilation as well as the garage, basement, attic, caravan, cabin, granny flat or beach shack.

The technology draws on nature to prevent stored materials from going mouldy and eliminates musty smells and mildew.

One happy customer is Margaret, who manages Solitude Retreat at Natural Bridge.

Six months ago she installed a SolarVenti in one her cabins, and now she is about to install one in a second cabin.

"As we are in a rainforest, some of our cabins don't get much sun and the SolarVenti has worked extremely well in getting rid of mould and mustiness," said Margaret.

"It's a good natural resource and it works fantastic."

"We'll definitely be putting more into our cabins."

"People can contact us if they want to have a look at the SolarVenti."

The SolarVenti suits all climates, including humid weather.

It keeps a room fresh and dry, prevents dampness, mould, mildew and rust as well as controlling dust mites, fungi and bacteria.

The results is a reduction of asthma, allergies and headaches.

Installing a SolarVenti ensures good ventilation without compromising security because there is no need to open windows and doors.

The device is available in four sizes and three colours.

Arne Hachmann owns Global Export Solutions, the distributor for SolarVenti.

He said the units may also be equipped with a cooling kit, which can contribute towards cooling on warm days.

"Being a warmer climate, there would be many people who could benefit from a SolarVenti," said Mr Hachmann.

"Tony Meldrum from Eco-Options in Ballina is the local distributor for the Northern Rivers and Tweed Coast area and has a demo unit in his shop."

"I am still looking for a distributor for the Gold Coast area."

"We would highly recommend SolarVenti for effectively eliminating dampness and ensuring a pleasant and healthy indoor environment in your house."

Ken & Beryl Atkinson, Macedon

"About one month ago, we installed an SV7 into a room where we used to have mould problems all year. Since installing the SolarVenti we have a nice dry room, and the system appears to prevent mould from growing and pumps out quite a lot of fresh air for its size. Very easy to install and get running, even as a DIY kit. I would recommend that every household install solar powered systems for ventilation to improve your health and ensure your house is fresh and free of musty smells."
